New head of SCSI

ANDREW O’Gorman has been elected as Chairperson of the Society of Chartered Surveyors Ireland (North East Branch). Andrew is a local Chartered Building Surveyor and is Managing Director of Andrew O’Gorman Surveyors with offices in Cavan and Dublin.

A priority for Andrew in his new role will be monitoring the outcome of Brexit negotiations. He is of the view that both challenges and opportunities will result and has called on SCSI members to proactively engage in the debate to ensure that the region continues to prosper and grow. The society has established a working group on this to produce a white paper to frame property sector concerns.

The Society of Chartered Surveyors Ireland is the independent professional body for Chartered Surveyors working and practising in Ireland.

There are over 400 members in the region covering counties Cavan, Monaghan, Louth, Meath and Westmeath.
